PROFILE

Jeff DeGraffenreid is a partner at Foulston Siefkin LLP. With significant experience both in-house and as outside counsel, Jeff brings rare insight to clients who trust him to understand their needs, develop strategies to solve them, and explain them in straightforward terms.

Jeff is a seasoned trial lawyer with experience ranging from bet-the-company litigation to individual lawsuits. He is comfortable with senior public company executives, entrepreneurs, HR professionals, and juries alike. He manages lawsuits and arbitrations throughout the United States and frequently appears in cases in the Kansas federal and state courts. Jeff represents clients in complex commercial matters and disputes, often involving supply chain issues, class and collective actions, and employment issues, including matters involving trade secrets, misuse of confidential information, and restrictive covenants. With his years of experience in the Kansas courts and his relationships with counsel from across the country, he is well-positioned to advise and support national firms seeking local Kansas counsel.

Between two stints at Foulston, Jeff spent nine years at Spirit AeroSystems (NYSE: SPR), the world's largest tier-one supplier of aerospace components, most recently as Deputy General Counsel. Jeff's responsibilities included managing all litigation and disputes, as well as support of commercial programs, human resources, corporate compliance, EEO compliance and investigations, and enterprise risk management. Today, Jeff uses the skills acquired during his tenure at Spirit to provide outside General Counsel services and to assist clients with litigation management, including acting as a liaison and project manager for clients without in-house litigation counsel. He regularly provides day-to-day employment and commercial advice to a broad set of clients.

Outside of work, Jeff and his family—wife Kelley, and sons Nate and Pierce—love camping, hiking, fishing, and sports of all kinds. They enjoy working with community organizations focused on youth development and education, particularly by learning life skills in the outdoors and through sports. He is board President and a founder of The Sedgwick Meeting House, a non-profit community coffee shop/café, and a former Council President of the Boy Scouts of America, Quivira Council. He is a Director of the Wichita State University Foundation, and recently joined the board of League 42. A family of passionate sports fans, you can often find the DeGraffenreids cheering on their beloved Wichita State Shockers.
